This can happen to you! Beware of scams

It happened to me when I was unable to login to my Netflix account to change my credit card number. After Googling Netflix to get their telephone number, I called the number that Google provided. A man answered and said he would help me. For security, he said I had to give him my full name and address. Then, for security, I had to send him a picture of my driver's license. Then, for security, I was asked to download an app. (I should have known better but I downloaded it.)

Next, his manager got on the call and said the first man had mistakenly deposited X dollars to my checking account. When I looked at my checking account, it had X dollars more in it. (Never did I realize the extra funds had actually come from my savings account). He said I had to login into my checking account and send the dollars back to him. I received an email from my bank stating the money had been sent. The next day I received a call saying they (presumably Netflix), didn't receive the money, and to call the bank again to send the money. I called the bank and they, finally realizing something was wrong, told me to come in with two forms of ID.

At that point I realized I had been scammed. I opened a fraud report and after waiting the required 10 days during which investigations were going on, I finally received my money back.

Lessons learned:

1. Use the Company's website, not Google, to get the real number to call.
2. Don't download any app no matter what you are told.
3. Call your bank with questions before sending money you are unsure about.
4. Don't be embarrassed

Go easy on yourself.
